DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

1. Applicant's election with traverse of Group I, Figs. 1-6, in Paper No. 7 is acknowledged. The traversal is on the ground(s) that both groups are directed to the same invention, that no serious burden will be placed on the Examiner, and that all claims can be applied either set of Figures. This is not found persuasive because 1) under 35 U.S.C. 121, applicant is required to elect a single disclosed species for prosecution on the merits and 2) the applicant should submit evidence or identify such evidence now of record showing the species to be obvious variants or clearly admit on the record that this is the case.

The requirement is still deemed proper and is therefore made FINAL.

Claim Objections

2. Claims 4, 7 are objected to because of the following informalities: the word "arid" in claim 4, line 11 is not understood in the context of the claim limitations; the verb agreement in claim 4 needs to be reviewed; the misspelled word "brakeing" should be -- braking -- in claim 7, line 4. Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

3. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Art Unit: 3682

4. Claims 3-6 and 15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

Claims 3 and 4 recite the pronouns such as "it", "its", "they", or "them", in numerous occasions creating confusions as to which elements those pronouns are referring to.

Claim 4 recites the limitation "the force sensing mechanism" in line 2. There is insufficient antecedent basis for this limitation in the claim.

Claim 5 recites the limitation "the housing's translational motion" in lines 1-2. There is insufficient antecedent basis for this limitation in the claim.

Claim 15 recites the limitation "said force sensing mechanism" in line 2. There is insufficient antecedent basis for this limitation in the claim.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

5. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

6. Claims 1-3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Walters, U.S. Patent 4,854,187.

Walters shows, in Figs. 1-4, an arrangement for use in connection with a parking brake for a vehicle, the arrangement comprising; a lever 40 coupled to at least one force transmitting wire 26 in a brake system, the lever being arranged so that upon application, the arrangement operates in two steps to achieve the intended brake power; in a first step, the lever is arranged to make a translational movement A, B for taking up wire slack in the brake system and in a second step, the lever is arranged to rotate C, whereby force transmission to the wire takes place at a higher ratio than during the first step;

Art Unit: 3682

a force sensing mechanism 38, 46, 48, 52 coupled to the wire, the force sensing mechanism having a locking pawl 38 that is arranged to be released to allow rotation first when the slack in the wire is taken up, and when the force in the wire exceeds a chosen value;

a translation lock 16 arranged to retain the lever in its tightened translational position;

a ratchet 10 arranged to retain the lever in its tightened rotational position;

a release arrangement configured to release the translation lock and the ratchet, the release arrangement including a release button 46 attached to the lever, the release button operating via a link system 48, 52 in the lever on the locks to free them, the release apparatus being designed to first release the ratchet and thereafter, when the lever is in or near its rest position, then release the translation lock.

7. Claims 7-15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Walters.

Walters shows, in Figs. 1-4, an arrangement for a two-stage parking brake, the arrangement comprising;

a lever mechanism (Fig. 1) connected to a brake wire 26, the lever mechanism configured to perform a first stage of operation (A and B directions) in which slack is removed from the brake wire and a second stage (C direction) in which a braking force is exerted on the brake wire;

wherein the arrangement is configured to perform translational movement in the first stage for removing slack from the brake wire;

wherein the arrangement is configured to perform rotational movement in the second stage for exerting a braking force on the brake wire;

wherein the arrangement includes a pin-in-slot configuration 20, 22 utilized for performing the translational movement in the first stage for removing slack from the brake wire;

wherein the arrangement is configured to apply no force multiplication during the performance of the translational movement in the first stage for removing slack from the brake wire;

a force sensing mechanism 36, 16 configured to sense the amount of force being imposed on the brake wire and transition operation of the arrangement between translational and rotational movement dependent thereupon; and a spring 36 incorporated in the force sensing mechanism and a degree of compression of the spring controlling the transition between translational and rotational movement.

Conclusion

8. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
